FOR COUNTY RECORDER.

Wm. B. Daugherty Is Out for the Office.

Mr. Daugherty has held many official and public positions, and has been through the whole list of county positions of a clerical character, having filled the different offices of County Clerk, Auditor and Recorder; clerk of three different courts and Court Commissioner, and thus practically acquiring a varied fund of legal knowledge. He has also filled the position of Deputy State Controller for a number of years, and has for the past two years or more been the Principal of the Business Department in the State University.

Mr. Daugherty needs no other recommendation; his record as an accountant and competent clerk is so well known that words seem superfluous. It is needless to say that if given the nomination and elected he will make as competent a Recorder as ever this county had.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

MOST PERFECT MADE.

From the Professor of Chemistry, California College of Pharmacy.

SAN FRANCISCO, JANUARY 24, 1889.

I have made a careful analysis of a sample of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder purchased by me in open market. The results of my analysis show that the Cream of Tartar used in its manufacture is pure and that it does not contain any foreign substances, such as Alum, Ammonia, Lime or other impurities. I consider it to be pure and wholesome, and in every way a superior article.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

Two Engineers and a Tramp Killed.

TO-DAY'S ELECTION IN MAINE.

Reed Thought To Be Elected by an Increased Majority.

Struck by Lightning — Traffic Temporarily Suspended.

Congressional Matters.

By Associated Press.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The Senate this morning agreed to the conference report on the River and Harbor bill without a division. The bill now goes to the President.

The Tariff bill was taken up and debate on the bill and amendments was limited to 30 minutes for any Senator on any one subject.

After a number of verbal amendments were agreed to, Plumb offered an amendment imposing a tax of $1 75 per gallon on distilled spirits. He said he offered it because he believed it would be necessary to have additional revenue, and this provided $21,508,000 to meet the requirements of the Government.

A reduction of revenue, which the bill as it passed the would effect, has been established at $71,000,000 by the restoration of the tobacco tax. In the Senate that reduction has been diminished to $60,000,000, qualified by the somewhat ambiguous statement from the Finance Committee that if the importations were kept up on the present scale, notwithstanding the increase of duty, the reduction of revenue would be only about $20,000,000. Plumb went on to give a resume of the appropriations for years and to argue that the appropriations for future years would not fall short of those for this year, and would, in regard to pensions, etc., largely exceed them. In fact, he should be greatly surprised if, in the next three years, the payments on account of that law would not amount to $60,000,000 per year.

Berry asked Plumb how many applications had already been received under the new pension law.

Plumb gave the number at over four hundred thousand.

Cockrell added there will be between 600,000 and 700,000 in all.

Plumb said no doubt there will be 700,000 or 800,000 appropriations under that law, and the appropriations under it would amount to at least $60,000,000 a year within the next three or four years.

He estimated the expenditures of the Government at $450,000,000, its revenues at $400,000,000, and said that there would be a deficit just as sure as the rising of the sun.

Wilson of Iowa opposed the amendment on the ground that it would put $35,000,000 in the pockets of men who owned 100,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits now on hand.

Dawes opposed the amendment because the increased tax would not apply to whisky on hand, which would be thus appreciated in price to the amount of 35 cents a gallon, and also because he would not admit by implication that the pending bill would result in a deficit.

Plumb offered an amendment making it apply to all whisky hereafter produced or withdrawn from bond.

The amendment was rejected, yeas 17, nays 39.

Vance moved to reduce the duty on cord clothing from 50 to 25 cents per square foot. Rejected.

The sugar section was then take up, the immediate subject of consideration being the Finance Committee's amendment to the paragraph imposing duties on all sugars above number 13. Sherman argued against the amendment and in favor of the House proposition, which would allow all sugars under No. 16 of duties standard, including good qualities of brown sugar largely used by the people, to come in free of duty.

A London Strike.

By Cable and Associated Press.]

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The dock laborers, coal porters, sailors and firemen at Southampton have struck against the employment of non-union men. The strikers placed pickets at the railway stations, who menace the non-union men who are going to take their places.

Reported Railroad Accident.

By Associated Press.]

WHEELING (W. Va.), Sept. 8.—A serious accident is reported on the Baltimore & Ohio road near Littleton. Six persons are reported killed.

The Maine Election.

By Associated Press.]

BIDDEFORD, Sept. 8.—The election opened very quietly here, and a large vote was polled in the first half hour. Biddeford will probably give a Democratic majority of 150. Two years ago their majority was 402.

At noon the vote was very close, with the Democratic side slightly in the lead.

At 2 o'clock the contest is the closest for years. The Republicans now claim a slight majority in the city, but the result may be changed at any time. The Republicans predict a plurality for Reed in his district larger than two years ago.

PORTLAND, Sept. 8.—At noon the Republican party was ahead in six wards out of seven, with indications that it will have 1,000 majority. Reed will have fully that and perhaps more in Portland.

At 2 o'clock every indication is that Reed will have a large plurality in Portland—larger than two years ago. The entire Republican ticket will have at least 900 plurality.

BANGOR, Sept. 8.—The lightest vote for years is being polled, with great scratching. The result in the city is greatly in doubt, and the Republicans are not claiming the city by over 200 at the outside. The prospect is good for the election of at least one Democratic representative, bnt nothing definite can be told till the entire vote is counted. It is extremely quiet.

LEWISTON, Sept. 8.—At noon the vote was very evenly divided.

At Auburn the Republicans were leading.

SACO, Sept. 8.—The vote at noon showed a fair Republican majority.

At Old Orchard the Republicans are well ahead.

Could Not Pass on a Single Track.

By Associated Press.]

LOCKPORT (N. Y.), Sept. 8.—This morning two Northshore trains collided with terrific force in this city. The engines were badly broken up and the tenders driven into the buffet cars next to them. Baggageman W. A. Fiedler was killed and two other trainmen seriously hurt. The passengers were badly shaken up, but none were wounded.

WHEELING (W. Va.), Sept. 8.—This morning two freight trains met in collision on the Baltimore & Ohio, thirty miles east of here, and both engines and a dozen cars were destroyed. The wreck took fire. Engineers Dominick Kelly and Trickley, and an unknown man, supposed to be a tramp, were killed.

Supposed Train Wreckers.

By Associated Press.]

ALBANY (N. Y.), Sept. 8.—The mystery attending the apprehension of John Reed, who was detained all day yesterday on suspicion of being one of the Central train wreckers was partially explained this morning by the arrest of John Kiernan, a West Albany freight brakeman, and John Cordial, a freight conductor. Both are striking Knights.

From words overheard by a reporter during Reed's cross-questioning by the Pinkerton's it is evident the arrests were made on information furnished by Reed. The latter has been very prominent in his hostility to the Pinkertons.

Struck by Lightning.

By Associated Press.]

ALTOONA (Pa.), Sept. 8.—Lightning struck the offices of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at noon, completely destroying them. Many valuable papers were burned and the loss is heavy. Traffic is temporarily suspended.

Silver Purchases.

By Associated Press.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The amount of silver offered for sale to the Treasury Department to-day was 804,000 ounces. The amount purchased was 225,000 ounces at $1 172 to $1 1728.

Bar silver, 1 16½.

The seeds of intermittent and bilious remittent fevers germinate and bear evil fruit. No community has altogether escaped it. In populous wards of large cities bad sewerage causes it, and in their suburbs stagnant pools in sunken lots breed it. There is at once a remedy and means of prevention. ## 5 O'CLOCK EDITION.

THE Silver State has already indicated an intention of inaugurating a mud-slinging campaign, and by innuendo threatens to show up the records of some of the Republican nominees. If the Silver State knows any good reason why any gentleman placed on the ticket will not faithfully serve the people, it owes it to itself and its constituency to tell what it is. Let us have one straightforward campaign in Nevada, conducted on a high plane of argument, instead of casting out insinuations and slurs. Do not be afraid to speak right out, neighbor. You will be respected at home and abroad much more than if you indulge in mud-slinging tactics, and out of the shuffle we will be pretty sure of getting good men to fill the several offices.

THE Republicans have put a ticket in the field that inspires respect and confidence. Now let the Democrats do the same thing, and no matter which side wins, we will be sure of a pure government.

THE Republican party ask the voters of Nevada to carefully scan their nominees for the various State offices and accord them fair consideration at the polls.

The declarations of the Republican platform are straight from the shoulder and if faithfully carried out will put the State on the high road to prosperity.

JOHN BRADLEY of Elko will undoubtedly be the Democratic standard-bearer during the coming campaign.

A DOCTOR'S REBUKE.

Immensely More Mischief than is Generally Suspected.

Dr. King, the eminent medical writer, in a learned disquisition on our national complaint, constipation, says:—

The great quantity of cathartic pills, etc., which are taken by the people of this country are productive of immensely more mischief than is generally suspected. True, the physic unloads the bowels, but its action tends to diminish the tone of the intestines; so that, instead of removing costiveness, it aggravates it, leaving the bowels in a more torpid condition.

Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla was designed to fill just such a contingency as the doctor's arraignment anticipates, viz.: instead of being a powerful mineral purgative, it is a mild vegetable laxative, that, owing to its solvent and gentle stimulating properties, is so certain a relief in constipation that it has been given away to hundreds, not to be paid for unless it was of positive benefit. It replaces constipation almost immediately with a natural easy habit, and is so mild that, unlike drastic purgatives, it can be taken indefinitely with perfect safety.

For "summer complaint," says Ben L. Bear, a prominent druggist of Los Angeles, Cal., "I know of no remedy so sure and safe to use as Chamberlain's Cough, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy." Mr. Bear is not alone in entertaining that opinion, as, wherever known, the remedy is praised by all who use it. For sale by Shoemaker & Co.

Buckien's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Wm. Pinkerton. 4ezdwtf

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

ELECTRIC FLASHES.

A NOVEL use for the electric motor is reported from Altoona, where a motor-worked fan is employed in a vault where books are kept in order to preserve them from the effect of damp.

AN unusual electrical phenomenon was witnessed on the Fourth of July night at Asbury Park. Colored balls of fire were frequently seen darting to and fro over the city, rivaling a pyrotechnic display.

THE new theory of the lightning rod is that it should as far as possible concentrate the energy of the lightning on itself in the quieter form of heat. Consequently, a piece of iron wire the size of a telegraph wire is sufficient for all ordinary flashes, and much cheaper than the half-inch copper rod or tape once thought to be requisite.

AN occurrence which shows how particularly ready electricity is to avail itself of any opportunity to "short circuit," or stray from the right path, is reported from Ohio. The switchboard of an electric company caught fire, the machine began "flashing," and the lights went out. It was found that an ordinary card photograph had fallen into the switchboard, and the gilt edge around it had come into contact with the two ends of the line, thus causing a short circuit.

RECENT investigations by Captain J. P. McClear have brought out some new and important facts concerning the behavior of lightning under certain conditions. After examining a number of trees which had been struck by lightning, he found that those which were struck before the falling of rain were shattered, while those which were struck after the rain began were simply scored, and had the bark more or less blown off. These phenomena point to the fact that during rain every tree is conducting electricity. Other considerations affecting the issue are the position of the cloud, the amount of foliage on the tree, its conditions of moisture, and its connection with running water.

ONE of the most beneficial ways of purifying rooms in which the atmosphere is especially liable to vitiation, is to produce ozone by electrical sparks, and the practice has been strongly recommended by the highest medical authorities. The delightful freshness and vigor which is perceptible in the air after a series of sparks from an ordinary influence machine is a proof of the salutary and refreshing influence produced. A physician in Philadelphia has taken a very wise step in the introduction of a small electric machine for the production of ozone. It is in a compact form, operated by a small battery, and can be conveniently carried. There is said to be a large demand for the machine for purifying the sick rooms of private patients.

ANOTHER industry which is destined shortly to be stirred to its very depths by the advent of the electric motor is that of the bootblack. The first blow at what will soon be regarded as the ancient practice of shining by hand has been dealt in Chicago, where electrical blacking machines are now at work on the streets. The outfit is of the simplest description. A small motor is concealed in a box beneath the foot rest of the bootblack's chair; a flexible shaft with one end attached to the armature spindle has the other fitted with a revolving polishing brush. The only other element in the outfit is a small push-button, and when this is touched the brush spins round at a speed that laughs to scorn the deftest hand that ever gave the exultant finish to the morning toilet.

A DELICATE TASK.

It Was Performed by John Russell Young in War Times.

While John Russell Young was editor of the New York Standard he performed a delicate task for the United States Government, concerning which until very recently not even his most intimate friends were advised. Inasmuch as the reasons for secrecy, however, no longer obtain, the fact has been given out that the character of the loans and securities of our Government were not understood in England and the Secretary of the Treasury considered it desirable that the press and public of Great Britain should be made acquainted with the desirability of American investments. John Russell Young at that time went abroad as special agent of the United States Government to London; but no one, not even the members of his own family, knew that he was in Government employ.

While he was abroad he wrote a number of very able articles on United States securities, which were published in the leading newspapers in Great Britain, and thus he successfully accomplished the object of his mission. While abroad he ran over to Paris and witnessed the siege and fall of the gay capital. Mr. Young telegraphed a ten-column account of the affair, which was unexcelled in its vividness of narration and the purity of its English. Ever since that time John Russell Young has been as much a traveler as a writer. He has traveled all over the globe for the New York Herald, besides having accompanied General Grant on his memorable trip around the world, the history of which trip was carefully written up and published in book form in 1880. He has also been Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Empire of China. During all this time Mr. Young has retained his interest in the Evening Star of Philadelphia, and will probably devote the remainder of his days to editorial work on that paper.

She went to different parts of California, as persons said the climate might help her, but it was of no avail, and I, being a druggist, thought I would get her to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before she had taken half a bottle she said she was improving, so she continued until she took half a dozen bottles, and now she is perfectly well. For nearly fifteen years she was unable to walk around, but now she can walk as well as ever." C. F. BLAKE, San Francisco, with C. F. Richards & Co., Wholesale Druggists.

EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYED.

Advocacy of Railroad Train Hands to Have the Same Rights as Passengers.

Hon. Thomas Fitch of Reno addressed the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen this afternoon in San Francisco and spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen: This gathering illustrates the character of our government and the beneficent changes which have been wrought during the last one hundred years. Anywhere upon the continent of Europe such a convention of workers as this would, in the last century, have been forcibly dispersed or its members imprisoned; and even in free England if they had been permitted to assemble at all it would have been under police surveillance. But you gather for mutual consultation and improvement, respected by the community, considered by the press, with one Governor—and possibly two—attendant upon your meeting, and quite conscious—as is your right and duty—that not one among you all need doff his hat to any man living, except through the courtesy of equals.

When I was honored with an invitation to address you I was puzzled to determine what topic to select for discourse. Statistics with respect to your organization, numbers and work will come more properly from your officers, and I know so little about the details of your trade that I should be certain to make blunders if I attempted to discuss your duties or achievements. Generally I know that to you is committed the duty which in the Orient is imposed upon the faithful Parsees—that of keeping the altar fires forever glowing. Generally I know that in the performance of your tasks you are called upon to encounter sweltering heat and bitter cold, fierce tempests and driving sleet, and that when on duty you are required to be as alert, as tireless, as industrious and as powerful as the fabled gnomes whose swart and fire-lit features illuminate our fairy literature. Generally I know that when you strike—as I think you have never found occasion to do upon this coast, and as I hope you may seldom have occasion to do anywhere—people are then compelled to stay at home, and freight accumulates in the warehouses until you resume your labors.

Knowing these general facts, I yet do not know enough specifically about your organization and its objects to offer you either valuable advice or interesting or even intelligent comment concerning it.

But there is one point where our lines touch, and where, in my profession, I may be able to present some suggestions that may prove of value to you, and that is with respect to the rights, or rather absence of right under the law of this State, of any locomotive fireman—or other worker—to recover from his employer for injuries which he may sustain through the negligence, carelessness or unskilfulness of a fellow workman. I cannot, in my opinion, serve you better to-day than by omitting the usual rhetoric and eulogy supposed to be suitable for such occasions as this, and endeavoring to point out a method within your power to adopt of securing such reforms in the present law as will make you less helpless if you are maimed through no fault of your own, and your wives and little ones less dependent if—by a calamity beyond your control—death should come to you while in the performance of duty.

Why is it that jurisprudence is almost the only science which fails to keep pace with the brilliant and advancing procession of progress in all other ways? In theology total depravity and infant damnation have been laid aside, along with the legend of Jonah's sojourn in the whale's interior, and the new philosophies—the result of modern thought and ancient cult combined—have stricken the shackls from the onward feet of the seekers after truth. In medicine the lancet, the blister and the black draught are no longer the ruling Trinity; the fever stricken patient no longer cries in vain for water, and aenesthetics have almost banished pain from among the ills of life. But when we approach the laws the entire membership of the legal profession, from the most venerable judge to the latest pin-feathered chicken of the schools, cries out "Do not disturb the venerable dust of innumerable ages." I am not especially given to iconoclasm, but I can see no greater reason for preserving the errors of by-gone ages in law than for insisting upon a literal six days' creation in theology, or for adhering to blue mass and brimstone in medicine.

The common law doctrine which relieves the employer from responsibility for injuries which his employe may sustain through the negligence of a fellow workmen, has been upheld and strengthened and enlarged and construed by the Courts of England and America in the interest of employers, until it has grown into a monstrous and apparently impregnable fortress, from behind which wealth can defy the claims of the worker.

To the shame of California it may be said that this is the only State in the Union besides Dakota which has by legislation established and fortified the cruel doctrine of the common law. Section 1970 of the California Civil Code reads as follows: "An employer is not bound to indemnify his employe for losses suffered by the latter in consequence of the ordinary risks of the business in which he is employed, nor in consequence of the negligence of another person employed by the same employer in the same general business, unless he has neglected to use ordinary care in the selection of the culpable employe."

This provision of the California code, and the common law doctrine upon which it is based, is against the interest of every locomotive fireman, every engineer, every brakeman and conductor and train hand in California. It is against the interest of every miner, carpenter, mason and painter. It is agains the interest of every toiler in factory and furnace It is against the interest of every laborer whose life may be taken or whose limbs may be mangled through the carelessness or unskilfulness of a fellow workman. This section of the California code ought in justice to the workers to be repealed and the common law doctrine upon which it is based should be swept by legislation from the jurisprudence of this State, as it has already been destroyed or modified in several States.

Georgia was the first State in the Union to inaugurate legislation on this subject. As early as 1855 her Legislature enacted the following law: "Railroad companies are common carriers and liable as such. As such companies necessarily have many employes who cannot possibly control those who should exercise care and diligence in the running of trains, such companies shall be liable to such employes as to passengers for injuries arising from the want of such care and diligence. If the person injured is himself an employe of the company, and the damage was caused by another employe, and without fault or negligence on the part of the person injured, his employment by the company shall be no bar to the recovery."

Iowa enacted a similar statute in 1867, but limited it "to employes engaged in the business of operating railroads, and not to all persons employed by the corporation without regard to their employment." Kansas passed an act in 1874 made to apply only to railroad corporations, but its phraseology is such that the courts of that State have greatly limited its scope. Massachusetts in 1887 enacted an elaborate law, but the amount that may be recovered there is limited to $4,000 for any injury, or $5,000 for death. Minnesota in the same year passed an act applicable only to railroad corporations, and excepting all railroads in process of construction. Wyoming, Rhode Island and Montana have statutes applicable to railroad corporations alone. In forty States and Territories of this Union the common law rule of non-responsibility to the employe prevails, and it is a matter of astonishment to me that the labor organizations of the country have not long since directed their attention and efforts to changing the law, for for they certainly have the power to do so if they see fit to exercise it. Maybe the Knights of Labor were not altogether wise in excluding lawyers from their membership, for lawyers are certainly laborers, and occasionally they have ideas which might prove of service to other laborers.

The reason of the common law rule is clearly stated by Chief Justice Shaw of Massachusetts in the case of Farwell vs. Boston & Worcester Railroad Company, reported in 4th Metcalfe. He says: "He who engages in the employment of another for the performance of specified duties and services for compensation, takes upon himself the natural and ordinary risks incident to the performance of such duties, and in legal presemption the compensation is adjusted accordingly. And we are not aware of any principle which should except the perils arising from the carelessness and negligence of those who are in the same employment. These are perils the servant is as likely to know, and against which he can as effectually guard as the master. They are perils incident to the service and which can as easily be foreseen and provided for in the rate of compensation as any other."

If I could presume to question the reasoning of so distinguished a jurist as Chief Justice Shaw, I should say that the weakness of his argument is in the assumption that a peril arising from the negligence or unskilfulness of a fellow employe is a peril "which the employe is as likly to know, and against which he can as effectually guard as the employer." In many instances, indeed in most instances, this is not the case. Permit me to illustrate: The general superintendent of a railroad knows, or at least ought to know, whether the division superintendents possess sufficient intelligence, experience and knowledge of men to enable them to select competent workmen, and the division superintendent, or his assistant, knows, or ought to know, whether the switch tender whom he selects is clear-headed, sober, wakeful, attentive and competent. The fireman whose life may be sacrificed, or whose body may be maimed by a misplaced switch, knows nothing whatever of the antecedents, qualifications or habits of the switch-tender. Often he does not know even his name or his person. He was not consulted in his selection, and he will not be consulted concerning his retention or discharge. The switch-tender may have received his appointment because he is influential at a primary election, because he is a cousin or a brother-in-law of the appointing power, or of somebody who has a "pull" with the appointing power, or because he has a pretty sister, or because he was upon a jury that brought in a verdict in favor of the railroad company.

I do not undertake to say that any employer makes a practice of selecting his employes for any other reason than because of their qualifications. On the contrary, it may be assumed that as a matter of self-interest those who employ switch tenders use all the means of information within their reach, and exercise their very best judgments in making selections. Nevertheless, the selections are made upon their information, which may be false or colored, and upon their judgment, which may be erroneous, and it is not made with the approval of the locomotive fireman, who has no information upon the subject, and who does not exercise, and cannot exercise, any judgment in the premises.

And when a switch is misplaced, and a locomotive overturned, and a fireman lies crushed under the wreck, what mockery of logic and of justice is it which says to him: "You can recover nothing if you live, and your family will be entitled to nothing if you die, because the drunkenness or the stupidity of the switch-tender, whom you did not know and never saw, was a peril which you were as likely to know, and against which you could have guarded as effectually as your employer."

Suppose a waiter in a hotel, sent to to the fifth story with an order, is injured by the carelessness of the man in charge of the elevator; suppose a machinist at the lathe or the anvil crippled through the carelessness of the engineer in the basement; suppose a mason, or painter, or carpenter thrown to the ground by a loaded wagon carelessly driven against the scaffolding; suppose a miner hurled to the bottom of the shaft, or strangled or drowned in a drift or tunnel through the neglect of the engineer in the hoisting house. In none of these instances could the injured man or his heirs recover from the common employer, and in none of them is there in fact—whatever there may be in law—any common employment of the man injured and the man whose carelessness caused the injury.

There is doubtless a special and extraordinary risk incurred by railroad employes, and therefore greater necessity for protective legislation in their behalf, but the principle underlying the reform I advocate will extend with equal logic and equal force to all other trades and avocations, and the true rule should be that an employe may recover from his employer in any case where he might recover if he were not an employe. If an elevator in a dry goods house falls through fault of the engineer, why should not the elevator boy recover damages as well as the passengers in the elevator? If it falls through the unskilfulness of the elevator boy, why should not the injured clerk recover as well as the injured customer.

The legal presumption that the risks of the business are estimated for in the compensation paid the employes is a pleasant legal fiction. Do the miners on the Comstock receive more wages because of the risks of fire, and flood, and premature explosions, and falling cages? Does the hod carrier obtain a larger compensation because of the risk that the teamster may drive his team against the ladder? Does the bookkeeper collect higher wages because of the risk of being blown up by an unskilful gas tender? Is the actor's salary larger because of the risk of being maimed through the carelessness of the stage carpenter?

The rule that the servant cannot recover from the master for injuries inflicted through the negligence of a fellow-servant is as old as the English common law, and it is quite old enough to die, for it has survived all the conditions which gave it birth. It originated in a system of society where the terms "master and servant" were almost equivalent to the words "master and slave"—where the employer and employed had in theory both rights and duties, but where in practice the servant usually had all of the duties and the master all of the rights. It is a rule that was established before railroads were built, before the use of steam or electricity was known, before great manufacturing establishments existed. The employe in those times was usually a member of the family of his employer, sleeping under the same roof, eating at the lower part of the same board, working in the same shop. Each employe was under the eye of all the other employes, and all were under the eyes of the employer. Under such circumstances there might be some justice in the rule, while, under the changed circumstances existing to-day, there is no justice in it whatever. At an early day that rule was limited to cases where both the negligent and the injured employe were engaged in a common employment, and had the phrase "common employment" been construed by the Courts with fairness to the servant, the injustice of the rule might not be so obvious, but the tendency of the Courts has been to enlarge their constructions in the interest of employers and narrow them in the interest of employes. A few of the many hundred cases reported in the books may be quoted to illustrate this tendency.

In the case of Slater vs. Jewett, reported in 85th New York Court of Appeals reports, a telegraph operator at Salamanca, on the Erie Railroad, omitted to give the engineer of an east-bound train orders received from the train dispatcher as to the place where the east-bound and west-bound trains should meet. A collision ensued, and Slater, who was a locomotive fireman on the west-bound train, was killed. What possible knowledge could Slater have had of the qualifications of the telegraph operator? And in what sense, other than a legal one, could the telegraph operator and the locomotive fireman be said to be engaged in a common enterprise?

In the case of Sarmon against the New York and Harlem Railroad Company, reported in 92nd New York Court of Appeals reports, a careless switch tender permitted the switch to become displaced so that two cars of the train were thrown off. One of these struck some empty cars on a side track, and propelled them across 52nd street, where they struck and killed Thomas Sarmon, who was employed to attend a chain across that street so as to prevent people from driving or going across. The Court nonsulted the administrator of Thomas Sarmon on the ground that the man who attended the chain to keep vehicles from crossing the track was engaged in a common enterprise with the switch tender.

In a Pennsylvania case a painter was employed by the railroad company to paint the outside of its station house, and while he was engaged in this work a careless brakeman suffered a car to escape and run down an unused track in front of the station, where it struck the painters ladder and threw him to the ground. His only consolation for a broken leg was to be told by the court that when he was spreading paint upon the front of the railroad station building he was engaged in a common enterprise with the man whose duty it was to brake the cars, and therefore he could not recover from the common employer.

There are numerous instances of laborers employed in gravel pits and transported on gravel cars to and from the scene of their labors, who have been mangled through the negligence of an engineer or conductor, and who could recover nothing from the company because the grader was a fellow servent with the engineer.

There was a case where the miner who was charged with the care of giant powder to be used for blasting in a railroad tunnel handled it in such a careless way that it exploded and injured some laborers who were sawing cord wood for the use of locomotives, but, according to the law as expounded by Chief Justice Shaw, this was "one of the perils incident to the business of wood sawing," and no recovery was allowed.

In the collision which occurred in Oakland twenty years ago through the neglect of a switch tender, every injured passenger was entitled to recover damages from the railroad company, but the engineer and firemen and conductors and brakemen and train hands could not recover because they were fellow workmen with the switch tender.

In the case of Yoemans against the Contra Costa Steam Naviga ion Company, reported in 44th California, the plaintiff was a barkeeper on a steamer running between San Francisco and Petaluma, and as he was about to enter the cars at Petaluma intending to make the usual daily trip to San Francisco, the boiler of the locomotive in charge of the defendants engineer exploded and caused Yeoman personal injury. It was contended by counsel learned in the law that the barkeeper on the steamboat was engaged in a common enterprise with the engineer on the locomotive, and doubtless the plaintiff would have lost his case had it not been for the fact that he was not a barkeeper who was hired by the company; but on the contrary, he rented the bar of the company and paid it two hundred dollars a month for rent and daily passage on its trains to the boat.

There is an ancient maxim of the law writers that, "when the reason of the rule changes, then the rule should change," and the rule which might have been a just one in a community where there were seldom more than a few dozen men employed by one man, and where the use of steam, of electricity, of explosives and of powerful and intricate machinery was unknown, has no reason for its existence in a community where thousands and sometimes tens of thousands of men are employed by one corporation, and where the error of a telegraph operator a hundred miles away may bring death or injury to a faithful and blameless fireman or conductor or engineer. A change in the law that shall place the railroad employe upon an equality of right with the railroad passenger, is a change that will add only the cost of accident insurance for its employes to expense account of the railroad and mining and manufacturing companies. It is a change that will secure greater safety to the traveling public for it will induce a more scrutinizing selection of sober careful and reliable men for positions where sobriety are needed. It is a change that might alleviate the sufferings of many a gallant worker striken down in the performance of duty, and lighten the gloom of poverty which otherwise might rest upon widowed or orphaned households.

The means of effecting such a change in California are exceedingly simple. Substitute for Section 1970 of the Civil Code the following, "Every person or corporation organized or doing business in this state, shall be liable for all damages sustained by any employe thereof by reason of the negligence carelessness of any other employe thereof, without contributory negligence on the part of the person injured, when sustained within this state; and no contract, rule, or regulation between such person or corporation and any employe shall impair or diminish such liability.

I submit to your candor and judgment if one such measure as I have suggested is not likely to prove of more practical advantage to the workers of this land than attempts to obtain without the aid of law, and sometimes in defiance of law, advantages which are often more sentimental than solid?

I hardly know which are the worst citizens, the sordid and unsagacious capitalists who sometimes seek to lessen the wages and so degrade the lives of the workers, or the wage-workers who sometimes combine in efforts usually futile, to compel capitalists to abandon their undoubted rights. A rapacious and tyrranous employer is a curse to any community and so is the idle and unthrifty man who demands an unearned share of the result of industry, and who clamors for bread or blood, meaning thereby somebody elses bread and somebody elses blood. We have in this country to-day all the comments of a revolution. It will need wise counsels, and prudence and mutual concessions to avert it, and only a narrow minded and selfish man will seek to dissensions between capital and labor.

Labor is as much interested as capital in the preservation of order, for labor pays the cost of disorder. The millions of property which some years since were destroyed by the Pittsburg rioters in their rage, were paid for by the municipality. The municipality collects this in taxes from the real estate owners, and the real estate owners collect it in turn from their tenants, and every time the rent of a cottage or a room in a tenement house is paid by a wage-worker in Pittsburg, there is paid a part of the cost of the Pittsburg riot.

If the laborer strikes for higher wages, and after long delay succeeds, he loses what he might have earned during the strike. If he does not strike he loses an increase of wages which he might have gained by a strike. If, maddened by injustice, he destroyes property, then he and his fellow laborers must in the end help pay for the property.

Is there any remedy for this injustice? Is there any possible equitable adjustment between capital and labor? That question has been asked in sorrow, it has been asked in anger, it has been propounded in every school of philosophy for two thousand years. It has been asked by every student of social science from Socrates to Henry George. Many plans of adjustment have been discovered, and trial has been made of some; but strikes, and arbitrations and co-operations and laws regulating hours and conditions of labor have alike failed and will ever fail to exempt man from the decree "in the sweat of thy face shalt thou earn thy bread." All schemes of relief by changes of governments or of parties have evolved any plan by which two pounds of flour can be made from one pound of wheat.

Yet by industry and economy the worker in this country can in time accumulate sufficient means to become independent; and, within lines bounded by justice and moderation he can legally guard himself against oppression, and procure all needed reforms, for he has the ballot, and it is his business not to by stricken out of his vote by the jugglers of politics, but to use it to properly advance his interests and his rights.

Gentlemen of the brotherhood of Locomotive firemen, I advise you I advise the members of and the Trade Unions to this City and State, I advise the miners and mechanics and laborers of California and Nevada to make a beginning right now towards securing reforms in legalations. The time is propitious. Elections are approaching in both States. I suggest to the members of this Convention that before adjourning they appoint a permanent committee of their member to to confer with similar committies from other labor organizations, Let these committies formulate such a law as will protect the interest of labor, let the labor organizations of the candidates for Governor, State Senator and Assembly of both parties in California and Nevada that they give public pledges to support the passage of the law thus formulated. And then, workers, be true to yourselves and be true to the interests of your wives and little ones and let those candidates who refuse to give such pledge, whether they be of your party ticket or not, obtain their election—if they obtain it at all—without the help of your votes. You have in your own hands a powerful weapon for the defense of your homes. Use that weapon. Do not sell it, do not be tricked out of it by boss or caucus, but use it.

PRIMARY ELECTION

Of the People on

Saturday, Aug. 16, 1890,

For the purpose of electing delegates to the said State Convention, the Primary Elections to be carried out in compliance with the laws of the State and the instructions of this committee.

The following test will be required of each and every voter at the said Primary elections:

"I am a citizen of this State and will support the nominees of the Republican party."

The following Resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this committee reaffirms the State and National Republican platform for 1888, including the declaration that "the Republican party is in favor of the use of both gold and silver as money" and that it, "condemns all efforts to demonetize silver."

Resolved, That the persistent neglect of Secretary Windom to increase the coinage of silver to the maximum of four million dollars per month, coupled with his attempt to influence Congressional legislation so as to perpetuate silver demonetization, is a shameless violation of the silver plank of the National Republican platform, an attack on the rights and interests of the miners, farmers and workers of the land, and an act of party perfidity that should call for his retirement from the councils of an administration which is pledged to help and not hinder the demonetization of silver.

Resolved, That the Republican party is in favor of free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver; that it holds to this principle as a tenet of party faith and a test of party allegiance; that it will permit of no abandonment or modification of this doctrine; that let whosoever will prove recreant to the principal of bimetallism it will remain steadfast thereto, and that it invites all voters in Nevada who favor the repeal of the iniquitous interlineated law of 1873 by which silver was demonetized, and who desire the establishment of free and unlimited coinage as the law of the United States of America, to join in electing delegates to a Republican State Convention.

FRESH FACTS AND FANCIES.

ALUMINUM is said to answer very well for sextants, mining instruments and other similar purposes where strength, accuracy and lightness are desirable qualities.

A PIECE of leather in a New York store marked "walrus-hide" weighs forty pounds, is one inch thick and is as hard as an oak plank. Circular pieces are cut from it to make wheels with which metals are polished. Walrus-hide retails for two dollars a pound.

BY saturating bullets with vaseline they may be easily seen in their course from the rifle to the target; their trajectory course is marked by a beautiful ring of smoke, caused by the vaseline being ignited on leaving the muzzle of the gun, the smoke being suspended for some time in the air if not too windy. Much better scores result when grease of some kind is used, bullets are not so apt to split, the recoil is not so great, and it is believed the course of the missile is more true.

RECENT writers on Greenland say the Eskimos have become so crossed by frequent intermarriage with the Danes that Scandinavian faces are as frequently met as Eskimo in the native huts. At the present rate the native race of Greenland bids fair to disappear entirely within the next century unless it is preserved in its purity by the isolated peoples of Smith's sound or the east coast. It is the old story of the stronger race absorbing the weaker, just as some of our Indian tribes are now more nearly white than red, and will doubtless disappear entirely, not by annihilation, but through absorption by the white race around them.

SABLE ISLAND is one of the most dangerous points along the Atlantic seaboard. Wrecked men have sometimes been stranded on the island for weeks without being able to inform the world of their condition. It is now proposed to import carrier-pigeons from Belgium for use in the coast service, and quarters for their reception are being prepared in Halifax. Some of the pigeons, having become accustomed to Halifax, will be taken to Sable Island, and when a disaster occurs one will be set at liberty with a message attached to it. The pigeons to be used in this service are very rapid birds and will require but a short time to bring messages from that point to the city.

IN a recent lecture on "Flameless Combustion," Mr. T. Fletcher said: "The appearance of flame is misleading, and the greater the flame the smaller the work done, other things being equal. I have been asked by a well-known engineer if I could explain why certain boilers gave such an exceedingly small duty for the fuel consumed when the flues were, as he said, 'filled from end to end with magnificent flame.' The fact was that his so-called magnificent flame was a delusion, hollow and cold inside, and not coming in contact with his boiler at all. When the same fuel was burnt with a very small flame, hardly visible over the bridge, the duty increased some over thirty per cent."

THOUSANDS of Southern negroes wear the cast-off clothing of New Yorkers. Such clothing is bought for little or nothing by peddlers, who sell it to wholesalers in the central European quarter. The wholesalers clean, patch and press the garments, arrange them according to size in dozens and await the Southern merchants. The latter come from Washington, Richmond, Charleston, Mobile and half-a-dozen other considerable cities and buy as best they may. The wholesalers sell on ninety days' credit, and if one merchant does not offer fair prices they await the coming of others. Nobody's profits are extraordinarily large, but those of the Southern retailer are probably the best.

The companion of Sirius has moved in so near the large star that during the last two years the Lick telescope is the only one that has been able to secure any observations. According to the measures of Mr. Burnham, made last April, the distance of the companion is now just a little over four minutes, and its position angle is almost exactly zero.

THE shortest day of the year is not of the same duration all the world over. For example, the 21st of December being the briefest day, we find that in New York it was nine hours and three minutes long; while in London the day endured but seven hours and forty-four minutes. Geographical situation determines all these matters.

THE temperature of snow at different depths has been investigated by Signor Christoni. He finds that the variations in temperature of the lowest layer, next the ground, are extremely small, whilst the uppermost layer has often considerably higher temperature. The temperature minimum of the air-layer next the snow was always lower than that of the uppermost snow-layer, while an air-layer about twenty inches above the snow had a higher temperature than the layer 1.2 inches above the snow.

FROM experiments by Dr. Lendenfeld on sponges, it appears that absorption of food does not take place at the outer surface, but in the interior. When poisons are put in the water, the sponge contracts its pores, and the action is very like that of poisons on muscles of the higher animals. When strychnine is administered, sponges suffer from cramp, and when cocaine is given, they suffer from lethargy. "As these poisons, in the higher animals, act indirectly on the muscles through the nerves, it seems not without warrant to suppose that sponges also have nerve-cells, which cause muscular contraction."

OUR COLUMN.

These Are the Books

We Are Giving Away.

This book contains 480 pages; is eight and one-half inches long, six inches wide and two inches thick. It is printed on extra heavy paper and is handsomely bound, with embossed cover and gilt-lettered back.

It is different from all other works ever published.

First—It teaches those who have it how to tell what the matter is when a person gets sick.

All similar books tell what to do if you know what the disease is. This book tells you HOW TO DETECT THE DISEASE, and then what to do for it.

No other Book Published does this.

Second—When a person is really attacked by a dangerous disease, it enables you to know the fact, and in such cases its advice is: "Send for a competent physician at once." But in all ordinary cases, such as can be easily cured, it gives full directions for treatment.

Third—It is not confined to the practice used by any one class of physicians; but it gives, separately, and for each disease, the methods used by each of the different schools of medicine, and in ALL CASES the PRESCRIPTIONS ARE MADE by the MOST EMINENT MEN in their respective modes of practice. This makes the work specially suited to the needs of every family, no matter what medical school they prefer.

No other Book Published Does this

TESTIMONIALS:

Having examined the advance sheets of the work entitled "Our Family Physician," I can say that I find it accurate in its descriptions of disease and reliable in its therapeutical department.
J. F. COOK, M. D.,
Professor of Theory and Practice, Hahnemann Medical College.

I have examined the advance sheets of "Our Family Physician." I give my pleasure or recommend the work as correct in its mode of treatment of disease, and it deserves wide circulation.
J. F. COOK, M. D.,
Professor in Burnett's Medical College, Chicago.

After examining the publication "Our Family Physician" I can fully endorse the opinions expressed of its merits by the above gentlemen.
A. GUNN, M. D.,
Professor of the Burnett Medical College.

The book contains a valuable chapter of symptoms, which will aid wonderfully in diagnosing diseases and the proper remedies give for Allopathic, Homeopathic, Eclectic, Hydropathic and Herbal treatments.

We have a number of the books on hand, and we invite inspection.

There are three chapters in the "Family Physician" which are worthy of special mention, namely, those on "Diseases of Women," "Diseases of Infants" and "Care of the Sick."

The first of these is a model of its kind. It is chaste in language, contains no disgusting pictures for children to happen on and be over curious about, and taken altogether is the most practical, sensible and straightforward treatise upon this delicate subject that has ever been printed.

This chapter alone is worth many times the cost of the book to every mother even if it had to be purchased at its regular price.

The other chapters referred to are equally well written and valuable. See "Our Plan" on 4th page.

It is customary with newspapers to give premiums to new subscribers only; but the publishers of the WEEKLY GAZETTE mean to revise this old rule; they intend to do as well, at least, by their old subscribers—those who have stood by the paper in years past, and paid their money for it "right-tr-ight along." We propose to show our appreciation of these friends in a substantial manner; and as the premium to be offered is expensive, and as our express object in offering it is to increase our list of subscribers, we will ask every old subscriber who may renew his subscription, thus receiving the valuable premium, to constitute himself a missionary, and thus in securing at least ONE new subscriber. Come, and bring us one new name and get a book that will be of incalculable value to you.

☞The new subscriber also gets a book.

If the book is to be sent out of this office, 20 cents must accompany order to pay postage.
